Low VOC paints will impact the adhesion of wall graphics. Your local sign shop/graphic manufacturer can quickly and easily help you test your walls so the right graphic film is used to produce your wall graphic.

According to research conducted by Nielsen, 86 percent of people report being influenced to make purchases with store signage, compared to 37 percent who were influenced with social media.

Stone, concrete, industrial stucco, brick, etc.

Sealed concrete, vinyl, wood, commercial carpet, laminates, vinyl commercial tile (VCT)

2010 study by the Center for Advanced Retail and Technology found 17.2 percent sales lift with floor graphics and display in place; overall number of shoppers stopping in that area increased 180 percent; 11.2 percent of shoppers who made the purchase had not purchased the featured item in the previous six months.

Graphics applied to a window can be clearly seen from the outside, i.e., the richness of the image.

Graphics applied to a window appear invisible when looking from the inside out, i.e., the see-through viewing capability.

Intermediate films provide graphics that have (1) good resistance to lifting, cracking, and peeling, which can compromise the visual representation of the graphic and lead to potential graphic failure; (2) easy removability, especially important where business space is leased; and (3) easy changeability; easily change out designs or promotional messaging, making them a good choice for promotional retail.

Premium films are able to provide graphics that have (1) better resistance to lifting, cracking, and peeling, which can compromise the visual representation and lead to potential graphic failure, and (2) easy removability, especially important where business space is leased.

Cars, box trucks, vans, trailers, big fleets, boats, etc.
