Reference Information

Organization: Chrysler Group LLC

Document

Type: Collision Bulletin
Name: Replacement Underbody Coating Materials
Number: 31-008-12
Issued: October 24, 2012

Description

Vehicles:

2013	Dart (PF)	2007 – 2008	Sprinter (VB)
2009 – 2013	Journey (JC)	2002 – 2006	Sprinter (VA)
2001 – 2010	PT Cruiser (PT)

Purpose: Some Chrysler Group underbodies receive an application of poly vinyl chloride (PVC) which is remarkably tough and resistant to stone chipping. During the restoration of collision damage it may become necessary to repair or replace panels with the applied anti-chip coating, however the original material is not suitable for application outside of the assembly plant and there may be confusion in the field as to what products have an equivalent level of performance. For this reason Chrysler Group engineering has tested a wide array of after-market repair materials to determine those which provide equivalent protection to the as-built material, utilizing the same testing methods as are used for the production approved materials. Of the materials tested, only the following satisfied the original engineering requirements for chip resistance and protection to the substrate.
